RULES AND REGULATIONS

1.0 RULES OF THE TELECOMMUNICATIONS STANDARDS DEVELOPMENT SOCIETY, INDIA (TSDSI)

These Rules and Regulations may be called “Rules of the Telecommunications Standards Development Society, India (TSDSI)”.

2.0 PREAMBLE

2.1 There is a pressing need to project Indian interests, articulate service providers’ requirements, and promote Indian IPRs into International standards and products. This will go a long way in helping to create an ecosystem for Telecom / Digital communication equipment manufacturing in India, which is not a viable business proposition today due to significant outflow towards IPR licensing costs. Establishing a national Telecommunication Standards Development Organization is key to achieving these objectives. A standards development organization (SDO) for Telecom / Digital communication will help Indian companies to develop standards for the Telecom / Digital communication products and services to meet India specific requirements, which is expected to promote indigenous R&D and manufacturing. The developmental process will also help in creating Indians IPRs. With the development of new national standards, India will be in a position to influence various international telecom Standards Development Organisations and Forums in the development of global standards and in the inclusion of Indian IPRs in them.

2.2 While fully recognizing the overall objective of developing R&D and manufacturing capabilities in Telecom equipment in India under the National Telecom Policy, 2012, Telecommunications Standards Development Society, India (TSDSI) has been constituted as an autonomous “not for profit” Standards Development Organisation for Telecom products and services in India.
